PGR Community Check-in

Page 1

Who we are?

A student-led community for learning and discussing statistical theory & methods

- Initiated by Dr. Zexun Chen — started as a small experimental group with his students
- Open to all PhD students interested in statistics and quantitative research
- Any PhD-level knowledge related to or supporting statistical research is welcome to share

What we do?

- Meet regularly (biweekly) in a classroom environment
- Presenters use any materials (PDFs, webpages, PPT slides, etc.)
- 30–40-minute presentations, followed by open discussion
- Questions welcome during or after the talk
- Total session time: around 1 hour
- Interactive and flexible atmosphere for learning together

My personal experience

What we will get

- Peers genuine knowledge and information share.
- A group of peers carefully listen to your idea.
- A group of people working together to achieve tasks or goals that cannot be easily accomplished individually.
- Lecturer's information about conference summer school competition opportunities

Possible directions

- short methodological or technical talks,
- discussion-based sessions,
- mock presentations or interviews,
- sharing of tools, workflows, or data practices,
- collective exploration of emerging methods in statistics, econometrics, and data-driven research.
- more structured symposium-style sessions focusing on frontier statistical methods and their applications in business research.

Thank you!
